A coach. A neighbor. A school volunteer. The child predator could be any of these, warming kids up and waiting to strike. In Darlene's case, he was her husband and well-known, trusted member of the community. Darlene passionately presents audiences in the field of child abuse/family violence with insightful stories and critical strategies to protect children by communication and empowerment. This training session provides strategies in both prevention and intervention utilizing Darlene's own "case study" of her ex-husband's case.

Learning Objectives: Workshop attendees will learn:

- “Front Line” strategies to leverage your expertise status to further the prevention of child abuse
- The importance of an “Inside-Out” approach in protecting children from the ravages of child abuse
- How to incorporate the “Trust Your Gut” message in their own communities
- Effective intervention tools when working with the collateral damage of child abuse, both on the side of the victim and the perpetrator

Darlene Ellison, M.S., is an author, speaker and National Children's Advocate for the protection of children. Darlene's gripping personal story has resulted in raising awareness—education and empowering audiences to make a difference in the fight against child predators in the real and virtual worlds.
